We hold cooking classes for individuals or bespoke classes, ideal for private groups and corporate entertaining.

These can be held at our London school, as well as in Bray-on-Thames and Gerrard's Cross.

What each course includes

A welcome glass of prosecco or a cappuccino/coffee on arrival;

Caldesi branded aprons are provided for the course and are for the customers to take home after the event;

Water is supplied throughout the event;

Meal with the recipes prepared during the class;

Half bottle of wine or one beer per person during the meal, or two soft drinks for alcohol-free attendees;

Our teachers are very happy to alter recipes to suit dietary requirements however we do need to be informed with due notice prior to the course.

What to Expect

Upon arrival, you will be welcomed by the chef, who is going to show you where to hang your coats and store your bags. He will then provide you with a Caldesi apron to wear during the class (and to take home as a keepsake) and offer you a glass of prosecco - or a cappuccino depending on the time of the day - and some nibbles. The chef would then introduce himself and the assistant, as well as present the recipes that will be prepared during the event. Then the cooking begins: with a mix of demonstration by the chef and hands-on by yourselves, the next (usually) 2 hours will be dedicated to the preparation of the meal. Once everything is cooked and ready, you can sit down at the table with the chef to enjoy the fruits of your labour with the drinks included and have a little Q&A with the chef. Upon leaving the school, we are happy to provide you with takeaway boxes should you wish to take home some of the food, and a full recipe booklet will be emailed to you within 48hrs after the course.
